Program Description

This presentation will explore the pathophysiology of nonalcoholic steatohepatitis (NASH), including the impact of underlying comorbidities. We will also discuss the importance of early diagnosis and intervention for high-risk patients, review current management strategies and highlight the need for future therapies specific to NASH.

This program is sponsored by Novo Nordisk.

This is a disease awareness education presentation; it will not be certified for Continuing Medical Education credit.

The Product Theater content and views expressed therein are those of the sponsor and not of Digestive Disease Week®.
